Not illustrated. 1856 Excerpt: .that which he does not believe--the quack may kill alt that he attempts to cure, and conceal his faults most effectually in the place where we are told there is no repentance, --the lawyer may oppress the poor, plunder the ignorant and stain his hands with base bribes, until his profession fairly stinks in the nostrils of the people, --the rhechanic may employ materials that are imperfect, temporarily concealing their defects, or may use for his own purpose that which others have placed in his hands. But the tiller of the soil has no such tricks of the trade. He stops no crevices with putty--covers no defects with paint. His operations are all fair. He covers up nothing but the seed in his field, which is sure to come out again in its true character. He can plough and sow and reap and thrash, without trenching on the ten commandments. Whatever improprieties may accompany other occupations in life, we may rest assured that the moral law was never violated in the raising of potatoes, nor was any one ever swindled by horticultural cabbage. Accordingly, in all ages of the world, the best and purest of mankind hare feeen found among the husbandmen. Away from the busy turmoil of life; from the jarring, clashing discords of the world; heedless of the hero s victories or the statesman s triumphs, Along the cool sequestered vale of life, They keep the noiseless tenor of their way. Hence obviously the...
