If we ever allow our defenses at sea to fall to such a point of inefficiency that it is as easy, or nearly as easy, to cross the sea as it is to cross a land frontier, our great Empire, stretching to the ends of the earth, supported by maritime force in every part of it, will come cluttering to the ground whenever a blow at the metropolis of England is struck. Prince Bernhard Von Bulow, German Chancellor, from his book, Imperial Germany, p. 20: The policy of no state in the world is so firmly bound by tradition as that of England; and it is in no small degree due to the unbroken continuity of her foreign policy,...
