With these semi-confessions too many of us must make, we can scarcely be surprised that the public should get some unfavorable impressions. Of all the professions of life that of the law is of the keenest daily concern. To know the law is to know man s necessities as a citizen. It is the science of man and man. The lawyer stands next to the law, its recognized disciple and exponent! He stands thus between man and man, between the state and the citizen, at the very focus of human relations where meet th e million conflicting interests. From his very position and the nature of his knowledge he becomes the oracle and authority of men. The greedy and the benevolent, the bold and the timid, the vicious and the defenseless, the vile and the good, all seek him as confident and counsel. Some come for justice, some to defeat it; some to do their duty, some to avoid it; some to help the needy, some to grind the poor; some to cure injustice, some to sate revenge. Their charity, avarice, hopes, fears, anger and compassion, malice and remorse, domestic troubles and financial concerns--their outer methods and inner motives--all pass in his review, all invite his judgment and obey his counsel. He is at once the rock on which must beat the greed, the pride, the passions of men, and again the pivot on which must...
